

FIRE WARDEN TRAINING

This is a half-day course covering all aspects of fire safety and evacuation. It is a requirement for all premises to have an adequate number of trained certified Fire Wardens/Marshals to allow for safe evacuation if it becomes necessary.

It is important to choose the right locations for trained staff, as they should be positioned to assist in the evacuation of their area to allow immediate response and minimising the risk of injury to fellow employees.

There should be a sufficient number trained for each location/floor to factor in size, the volume of offices to be checked, annual leave and sickness.

We will assist the client in determining the numbers required using best practice currently in use.

Course syllabus includes:

- What is fire?
- Triangle of fire
- Classification of fire
- Portable fire extinguishers their type/use
- Fire hose reels their type/use
- Evacuation procedures
- How to check a room for fire
- Office safety
- Fire prevention
- Some advice on first aid

This is followed by real fire training and a small assessment exam. Real smoke training is also included if the clients premises has the facilities to enable this.

We are one of the only training companies in Ireland providing real smoke training as part of their fire warden course. We have identified that it is the greatest single risk to employees and the main reason for panic and communication breakdown during a fire emergency.

By providing real smoke training to fire wardens they will have experienced the biggest hazard they will face and give them the confidence to safely assist in the evacuation of their colleagues.

Certificates will be issued to successful students.

Duration: 1/2 day
